

AMATEUR HOUR PROGRAM SEPT. 8

So aptly expressed is this editorial summary by the Houston Post that we pass it along to the Democrats who raise cotton and give bonds to sell it. There is little hope of impressing the Congressmen until farmers themselves realize they have been scuttled in the worst way by the Communist Department of Agriculture:

COTTON SNUBBED

During the past five years, the South has surrendered most of its foreign markets for cotton. It has received in return compensation checks from the Federal Government which have failed by a large margin to restore income which formerly came from the cotton export business.

Although it was a patently bad trade, because the Southern cotton farmer and thousands of other Southern citizens dependent upon cotton were deprived of jobs and income, the South has co-operated willingly with the government's program.

Now the South is receiving its reward for years of co-operation in the form of plans to reduce the benefit payments on cotton next year while the payments of corn and wheat are raised.

The South which reduced cotton acreage progressively until it threw away its foreign markets is being repaid by a proposal for the most glaring favoritism benefitting the North and Middle West.

The South next year will receive a reduction in cotton payments from 5 cents a pound to between 3.6 cents and 4 cents a pound, a reduction of 20 per cent.

Wheat payments are to be boosted more than 100 per cent, from 12 cents a bushel this year to from 25 to 30 cents. Corn payments will go up 30 per cent or more, from 10 cents a bushel this year to from 13 to 16 cent next year.

While the South has submitted meekly to government regulation of its farming, the corn and wheat farmers have fought acreage control vigorously. Now they are threatening open revolt and the government is tempting them back in line with huge benefit payment increases.

The co-operative South, which already has co-operated to the point of impoverishment, is asked to raise another short crop and to accept benefit payments 20 per cent or more lower than in the past.

The Arkansas Democrat, commenting on this situation, said: "It is hard to escape this conclusion: Cotton, wheat and corn are 'political' crops, and wheat and corn are more political than cotton is. The New Deal is faced with a good deal of dissatisfaction in the wheat and corn belts. A strong sentiment is shaping up there for the domestic allotment plan.

"But shall farm aid money be taken out of the South to mollify the North and West? Arkansas and all of the cotton belt should oppose such a step with all the pressure it can bring to bear in Washington through its congressmen and its farm organizations. Cotton is in a worse jam than wheat, and a far worse one than corn."

We might add that the cotton belt not only should fight for justice in the matter of benefit payments, but should demand governmental policies that will enable it to regain its lost foreign markets.

Years of co-operation have destroyed foreign markets built up laboriously through the years, reduced many farmers to poverty and created widespread unemployment. Now additional impoverishment is in prospect as a result of reduced benefit payments.

It appears the time has come to scrap the entire acreage reduction experiment in favor of some system which will enable the South to compete again in world markets.

O'DANIEL DEFEATED IN MILAM COUNTY

Milam County on Saturday, August 27, voted against all candidates endorsed by W. Lee O'Daniel with the exception of Bascom Giles for land commissioner and Graves and Stephens for the high courts.

Gerald C. Mann of Dallas, former football star for SMU, led the ticket with a wide majority over Walter Woodul of Houston for attorney general. Jerry Sadler of Longview got a majority over C. V. Terrell for the railroad commission. Neither of these candidates were endorsed by Mr. O'Daniel.

Pierce Brooks, candidate for lieutenant governor, who was frowned upon by O'Daniel, was able to defeat Coke Stevenson of Junction in Milam County when the voters who supported O'Daniel gave him a nice majority.

Reese Turner of Jones Prairie was nominated for representative from Milam County when he defeated Joe A. Slavik of Marak by a substantial majority. R. A. Devers, incumbent, defeated Connell Clement of Thornedale for County Treasurer by a large majority.

The vote on Saturday was larger than first anticipated, the total reaching nearly 5,000 in some races. Complete tables are published in this edition of the Herald.

Cotton Ginnings Lower Than 1937; Short Crop Forecast

The plight of business as well as the farm population is manifested in the first report of cotton ginnings in Milam County made by Ray O'Neill, special agent of the department of commerce. On August 16, 1937, the county had ginned 7,206 bales. For the same date this year the county had ginned only 1,349 bales.

The crop this year is later than the 1937 crop but a reduced acreage has made a difference in the production. It is believed the county will produce not to exceed 25,000 bales of cotton.

Government benefits are so restricted under the present law that the farmers will be unable to show a profit on their farms this year. Considerable dissatisfaction is manifest because of the delay in sending out cotton tags to authorize selling of the crop. Farmers now selling cotton are requested to give bond much as does a man who commits a criminal offense, the theory being that the department of agriculture is taking no chances on the integrity of the farmers.

Tennis fans in Cameron will be pleased with the announcement that a tournament is to be held within the next few days.

Farmers Will Meet Commissioner at Taylor Wed. Night

J. E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture, will hold an important meeting in Taylor on Wednesday night, September 7, at 8 o'clock in the High School Auditorium. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the Domestic Allotment Plan of Cotton Marketing. The public is cordially invited to attend the meeting.

Complete Returns From Primary

Complete official returns from the primary election on August 27 are printed in this edition of the Herald through the courtesy of Judd G. Davis, chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, who with the aid of his assistants compiled the returns on Saturday night.

The coverage is complete and the publishers of the Herald thank Mr. Davis for his efficient work.

$250,000 In Motion Picture Contests

Swift's Theatres in Cameron announce their participation in a nation wide cash prize contest in which leading distributors and producers of motion pictures in the United States are co-operating.

At the theatre this week, Mr. Swift is giving away thousands of small booklets that tell the story of this contest. In brief the booklet asks questions regarding some ninety-four pictures out of which those who enter the contest must be able to answer at least thirty. These questions are set forth in detail in the booklet.

After the contestant has answered the required number of questions covering thirty of the ninety-four pictures, he is then required to write a story of fifty words or less on what he thinks about one picture. This is sent into the contest headquarters and takes its chances along with thousands of others who are entering the contest.

Cash prizes totaling $250,000 are being offered, the grand capital prize (Turn to page 3)

CAMERON ROTARIANS HEAR REV. MILES

"Service Above Self," the motto of Rotary International, was the subject for an inspirational address delivered before the Rotary Club on Wednesday by Rev. Vernon G. Miles, pastor of the First Baptist church.

To emphasize the importance of service and to give the Rotarians and their guests a word picture of the spirit of Rotary, Rev. Miles spoke of two men he had known in life, one of whom was a young lawyer who became a minister, took over a small church with a poor congregation, wrote a lecture, and became famous. For the delivery of this lecture to millions of people there came to his hand more than $5,000,000 which he gave away to enrich the lives of those around him and to educate poor girls and boys. Thus was translated into life the spirit of service em- (Turn to page 6)

TENNIS TOURNAMENT PEPS UP NET FANS

Fans here feel there is sufficient interest to warrant a tournament at this time. Those who play have had a summer of practice and should be at the top of their games by this date. The PFL plan has been adopted.

A fee of 50c will be charged each one entering the tournament and the fee when paid entitles each one to enter all events.

A local tennis star said, "As we see it, there is need for only two events, men's doubles and singles." Entrance fees should be paid not later than Saturday, September 2, and may be deposited with Raymond Leskar or Tom White. A drawing will be held when the fee is paid to determine the time of play. If all who are expected to enter, pay their who are expected to enter, pay their fee, it will be impossible for them to play straight through in tournament fashion and after the draw is made (Continued from page 1)

RADIO AND MOVIE SCOUTS ARE INVITED

With prizes valued at more than $150 and an invitation to radio and movie scouts, plans were moving along fast this week for Cameron's annual amateur hour program to be held on Thursday night, September 8th, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

In addition to 31 prizes given by Cameron business men, a grand capital prize of $10 is offered by the Cameron Band Parent's Association for the outstanding artist of the evening. This is the most valuable prize list ever offered in connection with these annual programs that enlist sparkling amateur talent from a wide area over central Texas.

The program is to be held on the famous Yoe athletic field in Cameron and special arrangements have been made with the use of amplifiers to carry the program to the remote corners of the field.

Beginning at 7:30 the famous Yoe High Maroon Band will give a concert. (Turn to page 7)

PENNY FAMILY TO BRING SAVINGS HERE

A new "family" of quadruplets known as the Electric Penny Family has just been announced by the Texas Power & Light Company and F. E. Woodruff, district manager for the Company, is beaming with fatherly pride these days as he tells about the antics of the quartet.

"These Electrical Pennies, Coalsy, Hotsey, Glowey and Tidy, are already at work," Mr. Woodruff said, serving our residential customers in a way that will soon make them even more popular than the Watts Family, their predecessors, or the well known Dionne Quintuplets."

"It's really not quite fair to refer to these interesting characters as quadruplets," Mr. Woodruff pointed out, "because they are not all of the (Turn to page 7)

His Life Story

Reproduced from
The Dallas News

Although I was started in the district school at Arlington about the second year in Kansas, my education out of books, began much earlier. I should say out of the Holy Book, because my mother began telling stories from the Bible as early as I could understand words and sentences. I know of no better place for a child to begin his lessons than at his mother's knees.

The Old Testament stories always held me spell bound—the awesome story of creation, Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden and their fall from grace, Noah and the flood of 40 days and forty nights, all the battles and wanderings of the children of Israel. But the picture of old Moses on the mountain top receiving the Ten Commandments was almost seared into my memory. I even dreamed about the clouds descending and the thunders rolling and long streaks of lightning playing about Moses while God was carving the Ten Commandments on those big slabs of stone. And when mother read me what was written on the tables, maybe I didn't understand all ten of God's commandments then, but I knew it was sacred writing.

Daniel Was His Favorite Hero

Daniel was my favorite hero in the Old Testament. I think he was mother's too. At least she liked to tell the story over and over of this poor boy who rose against such odds to be a leader of his people. As a small kid, I used to imagine sometimes I was Daniel, and, playing like some of the animals on our place were lions, I would dare them to tear me to pieces. One day Dad Baker sneaked up on me and yelled: "Get out of there, Sonny. You can't make a lions' den out of my pigpen."

Years later when I got my first job after business college, used part of my first salary check to buy two prized color pictures and sent them to my mother. One showed Daniel in the lions' den, the other showed Daniel in triumph before the kings. Mother always prized those gifts, I believe, as much as anything I was ever able to do for her. She left them for me when she died—and we treasure them in our home today.

The Old Testament is filled with fine stories and points the way toward the right to live. But it is a book of strict laws, of harsh commandments and of terrible punishments for those who fail to keep them. Mother never failed to add that our religious and moral life is fulfilled only in the New Testament. Mother led in family prayers.

She led us all every night in family prayers, and we never sat down to a meal without first asking the blessing. Mother looked at life and everybody around her through the gospel of the Golden Rule. Some folks wondered why I took my stand in a political campaign on the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule.

I only hope this simple, God-given platform will govern many more political contests and administrations in Texas, and that I will always be true to the teachings of my early childhood.

When the time came for me to go to public school, mother was anxious for me to make a good impression on my teachers and school mates. She liked to dress me up, even as a very small boy, in spotlessly clean clothes and have me recite little verses. She always encouraged me to have confidence in myself. The first speech I ever spoke was the well-known little verse favored by 5 year olds, which I learned by heart so I could speak it at the school house. Boy, it was a good one! I had a little pony

And his name was Jack.

I put him in the stable,

But he jumped out the crack.

More important, in mother's eyes was a nice suit of clothes for me to wear on the first day of school. She made it early in the summer—a new, white linen suit that she starched up pretty and put aside for fall. I was kind of taken by that new suit, myself.

Went to Town With the Cowhands

When the Fourth of July came round, I talked my folks into letting me go to town with some of the cowhands. There was a big celebration with political speeches, and I promised to meet my folks there. What was more, I even talked mother into letting me wear that fine new suit.

Now, I wasn't really interested in that big celebration and speaking. I was hankering to get to town so I could buy my first fire crackers. So I set out with Bill Sutton, one of the ranch hands, on my secret mission. At the general store I found just what I was looking for, only I didn't have but two bits to my name, just enough money to buy three packages of small fire crackers. I put one package in one side pocket of my white coat, the second package in the other, and then pulled a fire cracker off the third bunch and lit it.

Tossing the lit fire cracker into the street, it exploded without going to pieces and bounced back at me, the burning part falling into my open side pocket. Before I could do anything about it, the whole bunch of fire crackers in my coat went off, and by the time I got out of my coat, it was beyond saving. At first my mother was heartbroken, seeing my fine suit burnt and ruined. But my parents forgot all about it, once they saw I wasn't hurt, because of the worse luck of Bill Sutton. Having more money, he had bought a giant cracker that exploded in his hand and blew off his thumb and two fingers.

Went to School in His Overalls.

I had to go to school on opening day, through, in a regular pair of my overalls. They were freshly cleaned and starched. My three stepsisters, who already knew their way around school, dutifully let me trudge along with them the mile and a half to the school house. Even then they didn't pay much attention to me, chattering to themselves about the sort of things that interest little girls. A few months later, when the summer and fall were gone and the Kansas blizzards and snow storms made the mile and half seem ten times longer, I was to have a pretty close call for my life—because my older sister forgot me. It almost ended in a tragedy for W. Lee O'Daniel. Snow had been falling all night when my sisters and I started walking to Arlington. As usual they were in a hurry and talking to themselves, and forgot all about little brother as he fell behind them. The snow was piled up in drifts along much of the mile and a half. I was having a great time wading through the soft snow, which

I would sink down in with each step. Suddenly I dropped into a deep snow bank, over my head and out of sight.

I tried to climb out and with every wriggle burrowed deeper into the snowbank. Then I set up an awful wail, but my sisters were too far ahead to hear me. You couldn't freeze in the snow, of course, but I might never have gotten out until the snow melted if it hadn't been for Will Burling. He was late and hurrying to school, but fortunately for me, heard my yells.

Digging into the bank, Will finally got hold of me and dragged me to safety. The damage wasn't much, although the teacher made me dry my wet clothes by sitting next to the big coal stove. Will Burling never got a rescue medal—he's a prosperous farmer living near Arlington now—but he's certainly on my list of heroes for saving a young kid nearly frightened out of his wits.

The Old School House Gone

Will Burling was in the gang that grew up in our school days. There was also Ed Portel and his brother, John; Charlie Barrett—he's editing the Arlington Enterprise now, just like his good old dad before him—Ralph Crabbs, Fay Knorr, Ben Wyman and others. I know there never was a bunch of boys that had more fun, in and out of school, than we did. I suppose we dealt Charlie Hornbaker and other school authorities plenty of misery. And it worked both ways, because Charlie belonged to the old school that didn't believe in sparing the rod.

Ed Portel and I had to take our medicine many a time. He was another Irish boy and we sat together at one of those old double desks. One day he managed to develop a hole in his right pants pocket when his pocket was filled with buckshot. The room was as quiet as the night before Christmas when every once in a while buckshot began dropping on the floor, making a lot of racket. Soon the whole room was tittering and in an uproar. Ed and I tried to keep straight faces and stared at our school books like we never heard anything. Our solemn faces must have been a dead giveaway, because Charlie Hornbaker fixed the blame on us. Neither would admit the other was causing the disturbance, so the principal compromised by holding us both to blame. Boy! Charlie Hornbaker sure put us out in the isle and wallered us around on the floor.

The Wild Donkey in the Belfry

Not long after that Halloween Eve rolled around. The spooks must have been bad that year, because the school bell up in the main tower started ringing about midnight, clanging like the clapper had gone crazy. It kept up for hours, it seemed, and roused the whole town, because most everybody thought it was for a fire. Nobody could find the janitor to get in.

Finally they broke the door down and there in the hall, the bell rope tied in knots to his tail, was the wildest donkey you ever saw. I always got credit for that little episode. I'm not admitting anything, even now; the statute of limitations may run a long time, for all I know.

But our school gang was not to be discouraged or disbanded because of any punishment. And when summer vacation rolled around, it took on new life and vigor.

I started to the district school in Arlington in 1896. My older sisters were always anxious to get to school on time, so we showed up before the doors opened. It looked awful big to me, and I was sort of scared of the teachers and the principal, Chas. Hornbaker, but I soon got over my shyness. Especially as I made friends quickly.

Dad Baker believed in a good, sound primary education. Although he needed me to help around the ranch, and school lasted more than 8 months, he never kept me out of school a single day. A good grammar school—the little red school house of old days—is the foundation of real citizenship. We should make certain in Texas that all our children get this basic training, with as good common schools as we can afford. As Governor, I intend to co-operate fully with the school people in furthering our school system.

Behind the Big Geography

Whether I got fairly good grades in my lessons, or not, I can't remember. Maybe it is fortunate that the old school house was torn down years ago—and grade cards lost with it. I took to arithmetic best of all. Reading came pretty easily and when we lined up to spell each other down I generally stayed until most of the others were out and after I was the last one on the floor—and the winner. Geography was always interesting. There were lots of things in the geography book itself I liked to read about. Then the book, being bigger than any of the others, came in mighty handy in study periods. I guess I don't have to explain that to anybody who was ever interested in Dead-Eye Dick or some other thriller when he was supposed to be studying.

What I liked more than anything else about school was the Friday afternoon recitations, or programs. Some kids kind of hold back when they have to speak a piece in public, but I always got a kick out of taking part in any skit or saying a monologue. The funny parts appealed to me. Some of my old cronies recall that whenever teacher needed a clown in the play I usually volunteered. They also say I never stuck to the script exactly, adding my own words and some acting business that wasn't in the lines—the same complaint I get sometimes from the radio stations when I forget to follow my script today.

There was one real life drama, though, that I played by accident the first year I was in school. It was after winter hit Kansas that year.

Society News

Thomas Marshall Hairston and Veta Margaret Green were united in marriage at 6 p. m. on Saturday, August 27, at the home of the bride's parents in Lometa with only close friends and relatives present. Rev. Forrister, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Lometa, read the ring ceremony. Albert Brezeale, brother in law of the bride, sang "O Promise Me," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Brezeale. The bridal party entered the living room to the strains of Lohengrin's famous wedding march played by Albert Brezeale. Little Frances Nell Rogers, niece of the bride, dressed in pink taffeta, as flower girl, entered with Laurie Wayne Brezeale, three year old nephew of the bride, carried the ring on a white satin pillow and took their places beside an improvised altar. The bride was dressed in navy triple sheer and carried a bouquet of white roses. She entered with the bride's maid, Miss Norma Louise Rogers, who wore a printed sheer blue crepe. The groom, dressed in an Oxford gray business suit and attended by Morris Coward of Cameron as best man, met the bride at the altar where they made their vows. Following the ceremony, a reception was waiting for the bridal party and friends present. A three tiered cake occupied the center of the bride's table. Several cuts held emblems for which a toast was read by Mr. Brezeale. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Green of Lometa. After graduating from Lometa high school she attended Junior College in San Angelo. Later she took instructions in piano and violin at Mary Hardin-Baylor. She is a popular lady and her friends wish for her much happiness. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hairston of Marlow. After graduating from Yoe High School, he enlisted in the Second Medical Regiment of the U. S. Army stationed at Fort Sam Houston. After completing three years of service, he accepted employment at Lometa where the young couple will make their home. The immediate family and a few close friends were present for the ceremony.

A group of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McLane gathered at their apartment home Saturday afternoon August 27, honoring them with a shower of linen gifts. Conversation and a number of contest games were enjoyed by all present. The winners of the contest games presented the prizes they had won to the bride who charmingly accepted them. After the gifts were accepted by Mrs. McLane and admired by all present, little Misses Lora Anne and Ester Reed, sisters of the bride, served lemonade and cake. Mrs. McLane very graciously thanked her friends for the gifts and they in turn wished her many years of happiness. Mrs. McLane before her marriage on August 15, 1938, to Edwin Douglas McLane, was Miss Mary Helen Wise, oldest daughter of Mrs. E. L. Peed of Hoyte. She attended school at Yoe High and at Jefferson Davis Senior High at Houston. She was later employed with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company here at Cameron.

Mrs. V. E. Lesikar was hostess to her club on Thursday afternoon. Queen's wreath was used in wall vases and floor baskets and a large bowl was placed on the dining table. A guest of the club was Mrs. Leona White. High score awarded to Mrs. Leo Stecker and second high to Mrs. G. V. Schiller. The hostess served ice cream and cake.

Birthday anniversary of Robert Morris, founder of Order Eastern Star, was observed by the Cameron chapter, 553, in joint session with the Rockdale chapter, the Cameron chapter giving the program, with Rockdale as hostess, at the Masonic Hall in Rockdale, Tuesday evening, August 30th. Worthy Matron, Mrs. W. G. Harsha of Cameron chapter arranged the program. Judge Graham Gillis was speaker for the occasion and gave an interesting sketch of Robert Morris, his life work and his successes. Miss Annie Woolley of Cameron chapter, read the poem of Robert Morris, "The Level and the Square." Misses Maxine Akers and Martha Frances Brogdon, gave Cornet and Flute solos. Misses Akers and Brogdon are members of the Cameron School Band, and were given high praise for their fine contributions. Those to attend from Cameron were: Judge and Mrs. Jeff T. Kemp, Judge and Mrs. Graham Gillis, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Harsha, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bonds, Mr. and Mrs. Lamb, Misses Delphya Scott, Annie Woolley, W. H. Stafford, Mrs. Frank Reid, Mrs. John Copley, Mrs. Amanda Woolley, and Misses Akers and Brogdon. Following the program the Rockdale chapter served a dainty sandwich plate with fruit punch.

Announcement has been received of the arrival of Mary Loucille Cass on August 27, 1938. The baby weighed eight pounds and is the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Cass. Mary Loucille is also the first grand child of Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt Kornegay and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cass. She is the first great grand child of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Hughes, Mrs. Dona Kornegay, and Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Carroll and great great grand daughter of Mrs. S. E. McBurnett. Thus little Miss Cass has a number of first privileges. Her mother was formerly Miss Ruth Kornegay.

T. A. Howell, well known business man of Cameron celebrated his 70th birthday Sunday, August 28th with a lovely midday dinner. At this time there were present Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Howell, their children, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Howell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Howell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Howell of Waco, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Howell and family of Rockdale and Tommie Howell of Dallas. Mr. Howell received many good wishes and lovely gifts. They were joined by Mrs. Howell's brother and family, Mrs. Roy Griffith of Cameron.

Mrs. W. H. Stafford is visiting her sister Mrs. J. M. McCrory at Stigler, Oklahoma.

New Tractor by John Deere Will be Displayed Saturday

Cameron Machine Shop announces the first showing of the new style John Deere tractor on Saturday September 3, on its display floor.

The new tractor is a revolutionary design in modern styling and many new and practical features have been added to give better performance and a higher degree of satisfaction than any previous John Deere tractor. In designing the new models, A and B, all the advantages that have made John Deere tractors famous have been retained. Some of the features of the new tractors are: unexcelled vision, easier shock-proof steering, foot platform, hand operated clutch and hydraulic power lift.

W. J. Michalka of the Cameron Machine Shop was preparing to entertain a large number of farmers in the show rooms on Saturday when this new John Deere goes on display.

Lowered prices and better buying advantages during the month of September prevail at the Grant Lumber Company, announces Don Weir, Manager. The announcement is unusual because there is a sale on materials, paint and all building needs. Sales prices on lumber in September is good news, but when payment plan buying is added, it looks like the best opportunity of the year. Loans can be arranged with low interest rates and small payments each month. Lumber is lowered in price for this sale. September needs can be taken care of now at savings far greater than you ever dreamed were possible. Ordering lumber to save is out of date. Don Weir is selling it during September so low you will forget about east Texas mill prices.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MILAM COUNTY:

Although I was defeated for the nomination for representative from the 64th district on Saturday, Aug. 27, I received a large vote and deeply appreciate the support and confidence of the large number who voted for me.

During the campaign it was my pleasure to meet many of our citizens and I will always hold in grateful memory the kind treatment they accorded me. I hold no ill-will, recognizing that in a democratic country it is the privilege of everyone to vote as they desire. If at any time I can be of help to the fine people of this county I will be only too glad to respond.

Again thanking each one for their consideration of me and extending to my personal friends who helped me, my deep gratitude, I am same age. Glowey Penney is about 60 years old. He has been looking after electric lighting all that time and has added other tasks to his line of work in the home in recent years . . . such as the clock, and the radio. Other members of the 'family' are from 15 to 25 years younger than Glowey."

Yours very truly,

An interesting bit of history about each of these characters is given in the Electric Penny Family Coloring Book, which has been made available to the kiddies through local stores which sell electrical things. These booklets are free for the asking.

The Electric Penny Family was introduced in connection with the Company's Fall advertising program. When questioned as to how people could identify the various members of the Penny Family in their homes, Mr. Woodruff laid down this rule: Glowey Penny does the lighting and operates the radio and clock; Hotsy Penny looks after the operation of all cooking and heating appliances, such as cookers, toasters, percolators, waffle irons; Coolsy Penny takes care of home cooling, refrigeration, attic ventilation, and Tidy Penny holds sway over the laundry, the vacuum cleaner, the food mixer, the dish washer, and sewing machine.

The Electric Penny family will give news and information about the various types of residential electric service; counsel and suggestions about better ways of using electric energy in advertisements that will appear from time to time in this newspaper.

The entertainment is being sponsored by the Band Parent's Association and a small admission charge will be made to the field, the proceeds going to the band fund out of which annually is purchased instruments and uniforms for this rapidly expanding, widely known Texas high school band.

There will be no entrance fees. All contestants desiring to enter to compete for these prizes must register with Mrs. Don Slocumb at Cameron not later than noon Wednesday, September 7th. The competition is divided into eight sections with a wide range of prizes in each of the divisions. Heretofore the awards have been confined to small cash payments. This year the prizes cover a wide range of useful and valuable gifts, virtually insuring each and every artist who enters a prize.

Of outstanding importance in the plan this year is that all judges in the contest will be competent out-of-county individuals, thus removing local interest from any consideration in making the prize awards. The judges will not be announced.

There will be music, song, black face, acts and novelties, a two hour program of superb entertainment. The annual amateur program at Cameron is easily the greatest musical spectacle of the year and brings together the largest array of talent in central Texas. The lighted athletic field has ample seating capacity to accommodate thousands and with a small admission charge the bowl should be a colorful panorama of grandeur with an impressive array of events for your entertainment.

Bible School

Also known as the confirmation class met for the first time last Saturday at Peace Church in Rockdale. Four young people from the Sharp community and eight from Rockdale enrolled in the class. This is a good beginning, but the pastor feels that there are quite a few who are eligible, but who did not enroll as yet. There is still time to do so and it is hoped that others will also take advantage of the opportunity offered. The class meets every Saturday at 1 p. m. and lasts three hours.

Gifts for Orphans

Last Sunday both congregations participated in bringing gifts to the Church for the fatherless and motherless in the Lutheran Home at Round Rock. This is gratifying indeed for the blessing of God rests upon the givers and the gifts prove the love of the congregation for those who are less fortunate.

Among those from Cameron to attend the meeting and barbecue given by the Knights of Pythis Lodge of Bryan on Monday night, August 29, were Judge W. G. Gillis, J. W. Haygood, Albert Collins, A. E. Schiller and W. L. Wilson.

FIVE NEW TEACHERS ARE NAMED HERE

Five teachers in the Cameron schools have tendered their resignations on the eve of the opening of the 1938 fall term. The are: Miss Alyne Miller, second grade; Miss Mary Ross Coble, auditorium; Mr. Kluge, social science and physical education in the Ada Henderson school; Mr. Franklyn, Spanish department; and Miss Drew of the home economics department.

The school board at a meeting held this week elected teachers to succeed those who have resigned to take better positions elsewhere. Superintendent E. A. Perrin issued a statement Wednesday in which he said, "The following teachers were elected on Monday evening of this week: Miss Bendella Olson, primary class, a graduate of the University of Texas; Miss Marjorie Nabours, auditorium, graduate of Baylor University in history and science. was elected to teach here.

"Teachers who resigned will go to positions with better pay and better economics, graduate of University of Texas, will assist Miss Christine Miller in the homemaking department; Miss Pearl Hightower, Spanish, graduate of University of Texas."

Due to heavy enrollment this year, it was necessary for the school board to add another faculty member and Rufus Conoley, graduate of Baylor University, in history and science. was elected to teach here.

"Teachers who resigned will go to positions with better pay and better opportunity for advancement," Mr. Perrin said.

The board regrets these late resignations but takes the view that teachers should have opportunity to advance.

Short CHATS With ADELE MIREE

Everything and everyone has some influence upon something or somebody. Nothing or no one is isolated. There is a relation between things and their effect upon each other.

The sun produces heat and light to influence the growth of plants; the development of the plant influences the production thereof; the fruit of that plant serves to satisfy a want or need of some person; the person's reaction to the use of this plant will influence some one else; and on and on, each thing bearing an inner-relationship with the other; each detail influencing some other along the line of progress.

Each person no matter how insignificant or small he may be has influence over someone else. A person's influence in its far reaching capacity is limited only by popularity of the individual.

Influence may either serve to build or to tear down. The influence of Christopher Columbus over a fearful crew of men kept their courage until a new world was discovered. The influence of Joan of Arc led the French army to victory even at the cost of her own life. The influence of the Bible and its foremost character, Jesus, is far reaching in its effects upon the minds and souls of men. On the other hand there have been those and there still are many whose lives have been given to influence the downfall, demoralization, and decay of individuals and civilization.

Would your influence react upon those with whom you come in contact with for good or bad? Would you like to install in another's mind some ideals and aspirations of living? Then, so live that your influence will be for the good of humanity.

This was the second consecutive year that the school has achieved this honor and the community should be proud. To obtain a certificate, Geography maps, a Texas History chart, a Health chart, playground and visual aid equipment were purchased. A larger cistern was bought, and a sanitary drinking fountain and hand washing device was installed. At the end of the year the children took and passed tests that were sent out by the State.

This summer the building has been painted inside and out, according to the latest requirements for State schools. The blackboards have been done over and the stoves have been repaired. The vacant room will be made into a playroom where the children will find games to play, and where they will be sheltered from the cold and rain. The trustees of this progressive little school are Mr. Earl Pratt and Mr. Sherwood McCleren. The teachers are Miss Estelle Clark and Mrs. Tom Jeter. School will begin September 12. All of the parents and friends are invited out on the opening day to inspect the building and to co-operate with the teachers and trustees in giving Marlow the best school it has ever had.

E. D. Parnell Will Not Return to Cameron Next Year

E. D. Parnell, Texas' ranking teacher of vocational agriculture, has been elected to a permanent position with the faculty at Texas A & M College, it was announced here this week when he moved to his new home in College Station.

Mr. Parnell obtained a leave of nine months from the Cameron school board last year. Subsequent developments led him to accept a permanent offer and he will not return to Cameron. During his services here he coached two Texas championship teams in poultry judging and this fall will take his team to Kansas City for the national show. He was elected president of the Chamber of Commerce last spring but resigned a few weeks later because the work interfered with his duties as a teacher.

FARM CLUB NEWS

Mrs. Beuna Chambers, Bryant Station Home Dem. Club, Rogers, Texas:

"The simple gift shouts 'Merry Christmas' if it is gaily wrapped" Mrs. B. F. Talley, Jr., told the Bryant Station Club, to which she was hostess on Thursday, August 25.

Mrs. Talley suggested saving all colored paper, cellophane, ribbons and bright colored yarns. Also boxes of various shapes and sizes. Red wrapped packages tied with gold, green with silver, black with green, blue with silver are a few good combinations. You can never go wrong using white tied with any color of ribbon, yarn or tape. And did you ever try tucking in a spray of evergreen, mistle toe, holly or tiny sleigh bells when you knot your ribbon or cord?

Mrs. R. T. Patterson said that one should never be at a loss for simple gifts, use a small jar of jam, preserves, jelly, pickles or relish. Bake small fruit cakes, cookies or make candy. Pot holders may be made of six inch squares of print and bound with colored tape or crocheted of string. Aprons and handkerchiefs are easily made. Gay boutonnieres made of bright yarns are also easy. Watch magazines for ideas.

At the business meeting presided over by Mrs. C. L. Lively, club president, Miss Cleo Neal was elected secretary-treasurer to replace Miss Nellie Blackstock, resigned.

A short recreational program of games and singing was led by Mrs. Patterson, acting program chairman and Mrs. Talley, after which the hostess served a refreshment plate.

Two visitors, Mrs. L. H. Obermiller and Mrs. Ewing Neal, were present at this enjoyable meeting besides the 10 members.

The club extends a cordial invitation to anyone interested, to the next meeting at the home of Mrs. L. A. Abel on Thursday, September 15, at 2 p. m. Miss Dorothy Portey, County Home Demonstration Agent will be present. Her subject will be "Water In and Out of the Kitchen."

Frank Hubert of Austin who was a member of the University of Texas band for two years, has been elected director of the Orange, Texas, high school band, and orchestra. Frank is the son of Dr. J. S. Hubert of Cameron. He spent his early boyhood years in Cameron school, and on Monday, Aug. 29th, received his B. A. Degree at State University, and will take charge of the Orange School Band September 1st.

MEXICO

A Lecture by HON. M. G. COX

Hon. M. G. Cox, Cameron attorney, in a recent address to the Cameron Rotary Club, told of his recent visit to Mexico in the following paper:

Several years ago I visited Monterrey and Saltillo, in old Mexico. American troops under Zachary Taylor captured Monterrey in 1846. Saltillo under a former name was once the capital of the Mexican State of Coahuila and Texas, whence originated the many of our land titles, including some in Milam County. On this and a subsequent trip I found to be erroneous many preconceived notions about that country and its people.

I had thought of Mexicans as all being like the peons you frequently see, and of their cities as being malarious and filthy like Matamoros. I found Mexico City and Monterrey both cosmopolitan cities, somewhat like ours, and far cleaner and more sanitary than I had anticipated.

At Monterrey there are two most excellent Hotels, catering largely to the American Tourists, in one of which Pancho Villa once quartered his war-horse in a room adjoining his own, after he had captured the city with his rebel band.

I guess there are unattractive places there, but our party visited one night club, the grounds covering several acres, ornamented with tropical flowers and vegetation and electrically decorated with standing lamps of multicolored glass, of the size and shape of umbrellas. Though one could dance or drink, perfect order prevailed, and we enjoyed soft strains of music in an atmosphere fragrant with the odors of tropical flowers. Nothing occurred that could offend the most fastidious.

One evening we sat in a Plaza, studded with golden oranges and other tropical plants, whilst Senoritas, in colorful attire, were on parade, all going one way around the square, while the young men paraded in the opposite direction, facing them not daring to speak to any Senorita unless she first invite him by smile or word, when he would step out of line, change his course and take his place by her side. Until engaged, the swain does not see his innamorata except on parade, or through the barred windows of her home. Thus, perhaps, may have originated the expression of the disappointed "I would rather be on the inside looking out, than on the outside looking in." All Mexicans are not dark-skinned. I saw golden-haired Senoritas, as fair as any American girl. Many pure Castilians, including some of the nobility, settled in Mexico during the two or three hundred years it was under Spanish rule and their descendants, constituting today the aristocratic element, feel they are the equal of any other people anywhere, calling Americans "Gingoes," just as we call Mexicans "Greasers."

Mexico had a rich and cultured civilization before Cortez came, and before Columbus discovered America. They had substantial houses, scientifically built by stone-masons; they had boats and waterways and a system of water works, scientifically erected upon aqueducts ten or fifteen feet high, to bring pure water from the mountains many miles away and similar to the aqueducts of ancient Rome. Portions of these aqueducts are standing today, many hundreds of years after they were erected, a tribute to the capable workmanship of those earlier ages.

The first sheet music ever published on this continent was published in Mexico City. Their musical and artistic culture is of the highest and best. American "jazz" they do not like. When Saltillo party arrived at the hotel in Saltillo, two young Spaniards entertained us with music, one with a violin, while the other at the piano. To our amazement, they knew and could play compositions, any and all the played without notes many most difficult works of the great composers like Chopin, Beethoven and others, that different members of our party requested.

Upon a later trip to Mexico City, I saw many great paintings, masterpieces of the greatest artists. Many are in churches and many in the Palace of Fine Arts in Mexico City. During the Spanish reign, many of the richest art treasures of Spain, then in the heyday of its glory, drawn from every quarter of the world, were brought to Mexico.

Some of the finest tiles in the world are made in Mexico. Pictures are painted upon clay before it is baked. The clay is then cut and is baked without destroying any of the colors, and then the many pieces are assembled as a complete work of art. Mural decorations about. One containing the exact features of workmen and others who erected the University of Northern California near Saltillo is upon one of the walls of that University, painted by an artist from Spain. Words fail me when I attempt to describe the perfection and beauty of these works of art. Some of the sidewalks in Monterrey are actually paved with tile, and the walls of the old Governor's Palace at Cuernavaca, a large part of Mexican history is portrayed in mural paintings and decorations, and is explained by an attendant.

Sometime in the forgotten long ago, volcanic ashes had covered a gigantic stone pyramid, similar to "The pyramid of Cheops" in Egypt, and one or two nearby temples, now known as the "Temple of the Sun" and "The Temple of the Moon," where human beings were once sacrificed daily to their heathen gods, their hearts being cut out with knives of obsidian. Forests grew over these ashes during subsequent centuries and only lately were these pyramids and temples discovered and restored by removal of the trees and ashes. There was found an ancient Aztec calendar on stone, the wonder of scientists of the present generation, a thing which could not be the produce of savages or of aught but advanced scientific knowledge of astronomy and mathematics. On the back of the ancient altar in the Temple of the Sun appear carved images in stone, of people and animals, which resemble the art of the ancient Egyptians and Perisians, evidencing a lost civilization buried in the mist of centuries, seemingly close akin to that of ancient Egypt and Persia.

Time forbids telling the heroic story of Cortez' conquest of Mexico, and how, time and again, in the utmost extremity, he snatched victory from crushing defeat. A recent book, "Stout Cortez," contains an entrancing story of his exploits, without which, Texas as we know it, would not have existed and this book should be read by all.

In Mexico City, in a palace on the east side of the "Plaza De La Constitution," Montezuma placed Cortez and his companions, Montezuma's Palace being on another side of this Plaza. There Cortez daringly imprisoned Montezuma, though surrounded by millions of Montezuma's subjects, and when attacked, saw many of his men offered as living sacrifices to the Aztec God on an altar on top of a Temple in the north of this plaza. It is claimed more human blood has been shed in this plaza than any other known spot on the face of the globe, and several battles were fought there.

A mile or so to the west of the business section of Mexico City is the Palace of Chapultepec, once occupied by Maximilian and his Empress, Carlotta, laid upon the throne by Napoleon when the French conquered Mexico. Chapultepec means hill of the Grasshopper. A huge brass grasshopper stands beside Chapultepec Castle. Chapultepec is a rock about 150ft. high, crowned by a castle erected by the Spanish Viceroy in 1785, where Montezuma's Palace had been located. Chapultepec was captured in the Mexican War on September 13, 1847, by American forces under command of General Scott.

From Monterrey to Mexico City and for hundreds of miles below Mexico City is as fine a road as any in the United States of which is all paved. When leaving Tomezunchale you gradually climb the mountains, at a mile a minute, if you wish, the grade being only six per cent and this fifty mile strip of road being very broad. The trip over the mountains should be made in the morning, because dense fogs and heavy rains occur each afternoon. No water should be consumed until after you arrive in Mexico City. While resident natives can, and do, drink this water, hundreds of imported workers upon the road died from drinking it. In April there are millions of orchids blooming along the roadside. You can see wild parrots flying overhead as you ride along, and bananas and dense patches of corn grow upon mountainsides so precipitous you wonder how they plant, cultivate or gather the crops. Many savage Indians live upon the top of the mountains, and, for the safety of tourists, "policia," armed with rifles, and whose quarters consist of huts of grass by the roadside, with neither doors nor windows, patrol in pairs each section of the road.

I quote from an article by Owen D. White, appearing in the September, 1926, issue of "The Reader's Digest," as follows:

"The most adventure-filled highway in the Western Hemisphere is the new one, 763 miles long, which connects Laredo, Texas, with Mexico City. Recently I climbed its spectacular mountains, dived into its bottomless canyons, tunneled through its fogs—and got more thrills out of that road than out of all the others I have motored over.

"The first surprise came a couple of hours out of Laredo, when, rounding a turn, we discovered that the foothills of the Sierra Madras has quietly sneaked down on us. Before we knew it we had cork-screwed from 300 to 3000 feet above sea level and were looking across a vast coastal plain from whose floor rose many mountains—the rimrock of their crests standing up like ancient castles. These hills, bare of vegetation, were painted a turquoise blue by the distance, and the morning sunlight was turning the heat haze around their bases into intermingling layers of violet, pale pink and golden yellow. But this was only a foretaste of what was in store for us during the next two days.

"Dropping easily down grade, we hit a level road which delivered us, through one more rugged canyon, into Monterrey. Monterrey, which is Mexico's Pittsburgh, is a splendid example of how to industrialize a community without giving everybody a perpetual headache. Its air is a delight to breathe; its streets and sidewalks, the latter of gay red tile, always look as if they had just been vacuum-cleaned, while no one going along them is ever in a hurry. And Monterrey, which produces great quantities of steel, glass, flour, cotton goods, and dozens of other essentials, takes a two-hour siesta every afternoon.

"South of Monterrey the high mountains opened before us, and we did the next 178 miles to Victoria at high speed over a good asphalt road through citrus fruit country. In calendar time, we were rapidly losing centuries. When we reached Montemorelos, only 50 miles south of Monterrey, it was not 1936 but 1636. There were thatched houses, windowless and doorless, plows made of crooked sticks, creaking two-wheeled oxcarts and natives wearing white pajama clothes and shuffling along in sandals, or else seated in the shade making pottery, weaving baskets, training game cocks, or just looking at a spot. On a warm day a Mexican peon can sit and look at a spot longer and with less movement than any other human on earth.

"Everywhere we met that profound thinker, the burro. He cogitates constantly, and always does so exactly in the middle of the road, turning himself broadside to traffic and going into a trance.

"In Victoria, when you look at the sleeping cab horses around the plaza, the ancient phaetons, the flat-roofed, one-story houses, the 400 year old church sitting on the hill, and at the primitively garbed natives asleep under the trees—and then when your gaze falls on a modern brick high school building, with a playground full of well dressed boys and girls, the contrast makes you wonder if what you are seeing is truly real.

"Shortly afterwards we crossed the Tropic of Cancer. It wasn't particularly hot, but the mark of the tropic was apparent everywhere—in the increasing height of the palms, the size of the cacti. The dense mat of lush green vines weaves everything into a jungle which furnishes cover for countless deer and wild turkey and ocelots and peccaries; green jay birds with yellow beaks, and millions of parrots, big snakes and man-killing Mexican tigers.

"For no one knows how many centuries before the Conquest, the Huastec Indians in this wild region were living exactly as they are living exactly as they are living today. Go today. Go back a thousand years, probably, and on the day which corresponds with our Sunday, it was the custom of Huastecs to take with them that which they had for barter—corn, beans, skins, pottery, baskets—and go, along narrow trails now worn inches deep in the solid rock, to market at Tamazunchale.

"We spent the night at that town's leading hotel. It has four rooms. In the market place of Tamazunchale, long strips of fresh meat were displayed dangling from poles, and hundreds of Indians were seated on the ground eating around small fires.

"Beyond Tamazunchale the road climbed almost imperceptibly into high mountains. Far below, the Montezuma River looked like a silver ribbon; on the opposite side of the canyon the farms seemed set on edge. For about 100 miles the highway is a shelf, 30 feet wide, cut out of almost solid rock. It took the engineers, assisted by a whole army of peons, three years just to make their preliminary survey of this stretch. They had to take their shots and run their levels from slings swung over cliff edges; and when the real digging started, the laborers working with picks and drills had to tie themselves to the trees above to keep from going down to the bottom.

"Before we were an hour away from Tamazunchale we were 5000 feet above it and still climbing. Perpendicularly speaking, we were again in the Temperate Zone, but with the tropical one so directly beneath us that by driving close to the edge we could look straight down through the equivalent of seven or eight hundred miles of assorted climate.

"That country is an indescribable wilderness of magnificent mountains through which man has impertinently scratched a highway.

"No one who visits the City of Mexico ever regrets it. Mexico is beautiful, it is kindly; its climate caresses you, its history fascinates you, its antiquity astounds you, its architecture amazes you, its flowers overpower you. In short, it is a truly wonderful place."

"New Standard Encyclopedia," by Funk & Wagnalls, says—"Mexico exhibits two distinct and widely differing periods—that of the Toltecs and that of the Aztecs. Both were Nahua nations, speaking a language which survives in Mexico to this day. The 8th Century is the traditional date when the Toltecs are related to have come from the North. Their Capital they established at Tula, North of the Mexican Valley. It is related that a severe famine and pestilence all but destroyed the Toltec people in the 11th Century, and drove the survivors Southward to Guatemala and Yucatan, carrying their arts of civilization with them. Near the end of the next century, a fresh migration brought, among other kindred nations, the Aztecs into the land. Within two centuries and a half this last people had become predominant. After wandering from place to place the Aztecs founded, about 1325, the city of Tenochtitlan, or Mexico; a hundred years later they had extended their sway beyond their plateau-valley, and on the arrival of the Spaniards, their empire was found to stretch from ocean to ocean. Cortez landed at Vera Cruz in 1516. In 1540 Mexico was united with other American territories—at one time all the country from Panama to Vancouver Island—under the name of New Spain, and governed by vice-roys (57 in all,) appointed by the mother-country, Spain.

"French troops in 1863 entered the Capital, and in 1864 proclaimed an Empire under Maximilian of Austria." "In 1867, however," this "empire was overthrown" and "Maximilian was shot" driving Carlotta insane, and this mad empress died only a few years ago.

The future of Mexico is under strain. Revolutions have been freely the aristocratic class and the quent. They have no middle class, peons. Mexico is now in the throes of a communistic political experiment taking from property owners and donating to those who have not earned the property, and Trotsky has arrived in Mexico, and God only knows what the harvest will be. Communism is taught in public schools.

It is anti-God, anti-Church.

Church property has been confiscated, as has properties of American and English Oil Companies, and of private citizens. No one can blame the Church and other interested parties from desiring to regain their properties.

I predict that this clash of ideas and interests will produce bloodshed, with the Church, the property owners and perhaps a large part of the army on the one side, and the Communists and certain politicians and peons on the other, a conflict similar to that now raging in Spain. The fires now smolder right at our door. May we escape the flames, and may the God of Nations guide the United States through now troubled waters to a peaceful solution of our political and economic problems; and our hope is they be settled without bloodshed or revolution, and by peaceful and Constitutional methods. May we always truthfully sing:

"My Country, this of thee,
Sweet land of Liberty—
Of thee I sing."

FALL SEASON LONG OR SHORT

In the old days the harvest season was drawn out over a period of several months. In this modern day efficiency has reached the farms, thus reducing the time required to harvest a cotton crop. Regardless of the length of time required for the harvest the results are substantially the same in income to the farmer. If you are a good business man, you will apply the same progressive methods to your business that the farmer applies to his. You may not be getting a subsidy check from the government, and you will have heavy taxes to pay, therefore the necessity for getting your share of the business. The answer to the question how to succeed can best be answered by an intelligent campaign of newspaper publicity to a field where lies the buying power of our people.

The Cameron Herald circulates in the most profitable territory in Milam County. Its readers are home owners and land owners. Their income is certain. Every merchant owes it to himself, to the public, and to the town in which he lives to encourage better business by enlightened advertising.

The Herald maintains an expert advertising service for which it makes no extra charge. Its rates may be above the average small weekly newspaper in its competitive field, but advertising rates are based on circulation, and after all you demand coverage for your advertising and this you can get in the Cameron Herald, intelligently edited and published since 1860.

In our service to our patrons the best is never good enough.
